Weekend

▶ Help Make Verizon Work for Everyone!

Verizon is an $88 billion telecommunications giant with more than 242,000 employees, many of whom enjoy the benefits and protections of a union contract.

In Verizon's Wireless division, thousands of employees want those same job benefits and protections. Unfortunately, management has aggressively interfered in their efforts. It has used tactics like surveillance, threats and coercion -- even office closures to block attempts by workers to form a union. Retaliation against union supporters has led to unfair labor practice complaints by the NLRB.

To stop Verizon's low-road strategy, union telephone workers are asking Verizon Wireless customers to switch to a union company until Verizon drops its policy against employees uniting for a voice at work.

▶ Switch to AT&T

AT&T (formerly Cingular) is the only union wireless company in America.

More than 40,000 AT&T workers have recently formed unions by taking advantage of the company's policy of remaining neutral in organizing drives. When a majority of workers in a location sign union authorization cards -- AT&T voluntarily recognizes their union.

You can learn more about the differences in how AT&T and Verizon Wireless treat their workers at www.taleof2companies.com.
